Hualapai Tribe sues feds over lithium mining project near sacred spring*Submitted by: Kevin Davidson | Hualapai Planning Department | AZMirror.comHualapai Tribe sues feds over lithium mining project near sacred springBy: Shondiin Silversmith - August 19, 2024 7:15 am*

For years, the Hualapai Tribe tried to work with the U.S. Bureau of Land Management by actively voicing their concerns about a lithium exploration project near Wikieup, in northern Arizona.

The project allows a mining company to drill and test over 100 sites across BLM land that surrounds one of the Hualapai Tribe's cultural properties, among them Ha'Kamwe', a medicinal spring sacred to the tribe.

Ha'Kamwe' is featured in tribal songs and stories about the history of the Hualapai people and their connection to the land. The historic flow and spring temperature are important attributes for its traditional uses, according to the tribe.

Out of concern for Ha'Kamwe', the tribe submitted multiple public comments, sent several letters of concern and participated in tribal consultations with BLM throughout the planning phase for the Big Sandy Valley Lithium Exploration Project. Big Sandy, Inc., a subsidiary of Australian mining company Arizona Lithium, leads the project.

"It doesn't feel like the BLM really heard us or took our comments into full consideration," said Ka-voka Jackson, the director of the Hualapai Department of Cultural Resources, adding that the tribe often felt as if it was “never taken seriously.” Big Sandy, Inc. has been seeking approval for its project since 2019, and the Hualapai Tribe has been voicing its concerns every step of the way. However, their efforts still fell flat, as BLM gave the project the green light on June 6.

BLM’s approval of the Big Sandy Valley Project allows the mining company to drill and test up to 131 exploration holes across 21 acres of BLM-managed public land to determine whether a full-scale lithium mining operation could be viable.

Two months later, the Hualapai Tribe filed a lawsuit against the Bureau of Land Management, challenging its approval. On Aug 16, the tribe filed a motion asking the district court for a temporary restraining order against the BLM, asking for an immediate stop to all drilling operations. The motion states that if the drilling project is allowed to move forward, it threatens the lifeways of the Tribe associated with Ha’Kamwe’.

“Ground-disturbing activities have begun at the site,” the lawsuit stated.

Lawsuit: BLM refused to consider alternatives

Ha’Kamwe’ is located within the Hualapai Tribes property known as Cholla Canyon Ranch, and the boundaries of the Big Sandy Valley project nearly surround the entire property.

Only one portion of the tribe’s land does not border the drilling project. Jackson said it’s “surprising, appalling and, frankly, disgusting” that the BLM is trying to say there are no adverse effects on the tribe’s cultural property or cultural resources.

“The tribe maintains that we are opposed to this project,” she said. “This lawsuit is to make sure that BLM is going through the proper processes.” “These exploratory wells — some of which will be drilled close to Ha’Kamwe’ — will penetrate deep below ground into the aquifer that supports the spring’s flows,” the lawsuit states. “The Project will also create noise, light, vibrations, and other disturbances that will degrade Ha’Kamwe’s character and harm Tribal members’ use of the spring for religious and cultural ceremonies.” The lawsuit claims that the project violated mandates under the National Environmental Protection Act and the National Historic Preservation Act. Ha’Kamwe’ is recognized as a traditional cultural property and is eligible to be listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

“The litigation is asking for full compliance with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) and the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA),” said Earthjustice Senior Attorney Laura Berglan, who is part of the team representing the Hualapai Tribe. This includes BLM taking a “hard look” at the environmental impacts of the exploration activity, as well as considering the impact of its actions on historic properties, she said.

The lawsuit claims that BLM approved the mining project without appropriately considering a reasonable range of alternatives or taking a hard look at water resources under the NEPA and moved forward with the project without providing mitigation measures under the NHPA for Ha’Kamwe’ and other resources important to the tribe, thus violating both acts.

“This isn’t a situation where the tribe wasn’t engaged throughout,” Berglan said, adding that the Hualapai Tribe had provided BLM with traditional Indigenous knowledge related to the project. Still, it was not fully taken into account.

Berglan said the tribe has been trying to work with BLM for years, and has committed a substantial amount of time and resources to review drafts of the environmental assessments and submit extensive comments. “A lot of time has gone into this process, and to be sort of disrespected by not taking into account their Indigenous knowledge that this (project) is going to have impacts on Ha’kamwe’ is troublesome,” she added.

The lawsuit argues that the tribe even asked BLM to consider alternatives to the project — such as drilling fewer wells or moving them farther from the spring — to reduce its adverse effects. However, BLM refused to consider a reasonable range of alternatives to the project proposal. “BLM violated NEPA by failing to consider a middle-ground alternative that would address the tribe’s concerns,” the lawsuit states.

The Arizona Mirror contacted BLM for comment on the lawsuit, but a representative said the bureau does not comment on pending litigation.

‘We were ignored’

Jackson said that the Hualapai Tribe does not want this mining project to happen, and like many other tribes in Arizona, they are experiencing just how hard it is to stop mining operations in the state. “We submitted all our comments,” Jackson said. “We were ignored.”

Jackson said the tribe filed the lawsuit because it believes BLM did not follow the proper processes during the Sandy Valley project’s environmental analysis phase.

“Not all of those comments were addressed, and when the (environmental assessment) had been finalized, the BLM said there were no adverse effects on historic property, which is very contradictory to all the tribe’s comments that have been submitted to the BLM,” Jackson said.

Jackson said that before BLM finalized the environmental assessment, the tribe tried to stay in constant communication with the bureau to stay current on the project and were hopeful the bureau would consider their comments, but did not hear back.

“It’s been very upsetting for us,” Jackson said, adding that it’s been hard for the tribe because they are going up against an agency that has a lot of their ancestral homelands in their legal possession.

Dolores Garcia, the public affairs specialist at the BLM Arizona State Office, said in an email to the Mirror that BLM conducted outreach to tribes for consultations over the past three years. Details on the type of outreach efforts were not provided.

The tribes include the Chemehuevi Indian Tribe, the Colorado River Indian Tribes, the Fort Mojave Indian Tribe, the Hopi Tribe, the Hualapai Tribe, the Navajo Nation, the Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community, the Yavapai-Apache Nation and the Yavapai-Prescott Indian Tribe.

“Tribal consultation is considered confidential government-to-government communication, so we cannot discuss specific details related to consultation,” Garcia said.

However, Garcia said that, based on input from the tribes and the public, BLM worked with the proponent to revise its exploration plan, which included removing the use of a groundwater well within a few hundred feet of Ha’Kamwe’ and a nearby staging area. “Water needed to support the drilling operations will be trucked to the site,” Garcia said. “The proponent has also committed to providing the opportunity for the Hualapai Tribe and other descendant tribal communities to monitor ground disturbing activities onsite.” Jackson said their experience with how BLM moved forward on this lithium project did not give the tribe much faith in potential future projects. She said when projects like Big Sandy Valley get proposed in the area, the tribe hopes that the BLM will come to work with them and take their comments seriously because they have been the stewards of the land for generations. "We still use Ha'Kamwe' as a community," Jackson said. "When people go there, they have this sense of being, a sense of place, a sense of belonging, and a really deep ancestral tie there."

'Temporary' disruptions don't need permanent fixes, BLM says

As part of its environmental assessment, BLM listed several short- and long-term effects, including the temporary disruption to cultural practices at or near Ha'Kamwe' and the impact on native wildlife and vegetation of up to 21 acres.

Even with these effects included in the assessment, which are concerns the Hualapai Tribe has brought up multiple times, BLM concluded that the Big Sandy Valley project would not significantly impact the quality of the area and an environmental impact statement was not needed.

"Visual, noise, and vibration effects from drilling activities would be temporary," the BLM wrote in its final report. "Coordination with and providing notice to the Hualapai Tribe of drilling activities in the vicinity of the Ha'Kamwe' may reduce impacts to cultural practices at or near the hot spring."

Jackson said the tribe and its members have every right to be out at Ha'Kamwe' utilizing the spring for prayer and healing because it is part of their spirituality and religion. Tribal members have full access to the property and can use it whenever necessary.

"Having that type of noise occurring is really disrupting," she said. "It takes away from a lot of the spirituality and ability to practice ceremony in peace."

Jackson said the tribe will have to deal with the disruptions throughout the project's 18-month duration. "That's a long time for tribal members to be affected, and that disrupts all of our activities," she added. "It disrupts our spirituality."

The drilling project threatens not only ceremonial ways of life but also natural resources the tribe relies on. Jackson said the community gathers native plants only found in the Big Sandy Valley area, including willows for basket making, traditional tobacco, and clay.

"Those plants coming from that area have meaning," she said, and they are the same native plants their ancestors gathered from. "When we gather, we're not restricted to just the Hualapai property," Jackson said because tribal members gather on the public BLM land in the area, too.

"That's our right as people to be able to go out there and gather," she added, and the bulldozing that will occur to create the paths to the drilling sites will have an impact. "The desert will never recover from all that."

Jackson said part of what makes the area sacred for the tribe is maintaining the integrity of the land, and the tribe feels that the mining operations will permanently change the location.

They're concerned about how the project will impact the spring because the drilling will occur so close to the site. According to BLM, to minimize impacts on Ha'Kamwe', a water source that was previously proposed to be used for the project has been removed from the plan, and a staging area that would have been set up near Ha'Kamwe' has also been removed.

"Analysis of water resources has determined that the water source for Ha'Kamwe' is located in a deeper aquifer," the report states. The proposed drilling is not anticipated to reach the aquifer, according to BLM, and if water is intersected during the drilling, the hole shall be plugged using cement grout or bentonite clay.

Jackson said the tribe does not think that is good enough because if the mining hits the water and does utilize bentonite clay or cement grout, there is no guarantee that it won't have an adverse effect or potentially block off the underground water that flows through the spring.

"If the temperature were to be affected that's changing the entire character of the spring and the integrity of it," Jackson said, which is a big deal for the tribe because Ha'Kamwe' translates to "warm spring." "We're going to try every way we can to try and stop this operation," Jackson said, adding that this is the first lithium mining project of its kind on their homelands and they've opposed it the entire time.

"It's kind of scary looking into the future, seeing how these mining companies can kind of get away with this and how the BLM is letting it happen, even when they know how it will negatively impact the tribes and the tribe's sacred lands," Jackson said. <https://azmirror.com/2024/08/19/hualapai-tribe-sues-feds-over-lithium-mining-project-near-sacred-spring/> ■

Temporary Restraining Order on BLM

Arizona Tribe Wins Pause Of Lithium Project Construction

By Joyce Hanson

Law360 (August 20, 2024, 9:57 PM EDT) -- An Arizona federal judge has granted the Hualapai Indian Tribe's bid for a temporary restraining order in its lawsuit seeking to halt U.S. government approval of a lithium exploration project that it says threatens the life of a sacred medical spring used for cultural and religious purposes.

U.S. District Judge Diane J. Humetewa's docketed text-only order on Monday granted a temporary pause of the U.S. Bureau of Land Management's approval of Arizona Lithium Ltd.'s exploratory drilling program for lithium deposits, known as the Big Sandy Valley Lithium Exploration Project. Judge Humetewa issued her order following a Monday hearing at which she heard the parties' arguments over the restraining order bid. Also Monday, she set a preliminary injunction hearing for Sept. 17 and granted Arizona Lithium's Friday motion to intervene in the suit. The judge found that the company, also known as AZL, filed a timely motion, had a significant protectable interest and an impaired ability to protect that interest, and adequate representation.

"AZL's point is well taken that defendant BLM may not adequately represent its interests due to its responsibilities as a government agency to represent the public interest," Judge Humetewa wrote in her order allowing the company to intervene. Duane Clarke, chairman of the Hualapai Indian Tribe, said Tuesday that the tribe plans to keep pushing for public awareness about the protection of its water resources. "Today our people celebrate the granting of the temporary restraining order, but understand our fight is not over," Clarke said.

Laura Berglan, senior attorney for Earthjustice, said in a statement that the nonprofit group is in court because of the federal government's failure to protect tribal rights. "Like other tribal nations who for centuries have stewarded the lands across this country, the Hualapai people are under siege by mining interests trying to make a buck off destroying their cultural heritage," Berglan said. A representative of the U.S. Department of the Interior declined Tuesday to comment on the lawsuit. Counsel for Arizona Lithium didn't respond immediately to a request for comment. The tribe lodged its complaint Aug. 2 against U.S. Interior Secretary Deb Haaland; Ray Suazo, Arizona state director of the BLM; and Amanda Dodson, BLM Kingman Field Office manager, in their official capacities.

According to the suit, the Bureau of Land Management waited until June 2020 — eight months after Big Sandy Inc., a subsidiary of Arizona Lithium, submitted its proposed plan of operations — to contact the Hualapai Tribe about the exploration project. As approved on June 6, 2024, phase three of the project would allow Arizona Lithium to drill 131 exploratory wells on BLM-controlled lands directly adjacent to Ha'Kawme', also known as Cofer Hot Spring, in turn penetrating below ground into the aquifer that supports its flows, the Hualapai Indian Tribe said.

The project, according to the complaint, will create noise, light, vibrations and other disturbances that will degrade the spring's character and harm tribal members' use of it for religious and cultural ceremonies and adversely impact other resources connected to the site, such as plants and wildlife.

Despite efforts by the tribe that kicked off in June 2020 to protect the spring, the suit alleges that the BLM ignored these harms and approved the project, in turn violating the National Environmental Policy Act and National Historic Preservation Act. "For generations and through modern day, tribal members have used Ha'Kamwe' for cultural and traditional purposes. It features prominently in tribal songs and stories about their history and connection to their land, including those known as the Salt Song Trail. Both the historic flow and temperature of the spring are important attributes for its traditional uses," the suit said.

The tribe alleges that it first learned of the project through a BLM letter that invited it to participate in a National Historic Preservation Act Section 106 consultation that requested its help in identifying cultural properties or other areas of concern that may be affected by the drilling, it said.

Repeatedly, the tribe tried to get protections for Ha'Kamwe' and other important resources from the project's impact through the National Environmental Policy Act process, including becoming a cooperating agency and providing comments in June and July 2021 about the spring's importance to the critical aspects of their culture, the suit said. The BLM violated NEPA by failing to consider a middle-ground alternative that would address the tribe's concerns, it said, and by not taking a "hard look" at the environmental impacts of the exploration activity or considering a recent tribal study concluding that the project is likely to impact the spring.

Also, according to the tribe, the National Historic Preservation Act requires BLM to consider the impact of its actions on historic properties, yet the federal agency found that the exploratory project will not affect the spring that is recognized as a "Traditional Cultural Property" and eligible for a National Register of Historic Places listing, according to the tribe.

On Monday, the federal government opposed the tribe's bid for a temporary restraining order and a preliminary injunction, saying the Hualapai are not likely to succeed on the merits because the Bureau of Land Management took a hard look at the project's impacts and didn't violate NEPA or NHPA. "The project at issue here is one part of the United States' larger effort to transition to renewable sources of energy," the government argued. "As the website for Earthjustice, Hualapai's attorneys, explains, a 'clean energy transition' to electric vehicles would be beneficial because 'EVs are much better for the climate than gas-powered cars' and 'require fewer natural resources.' But the batteries for electric vehicles require lithium."

The Hualapai Indian Tribe is represented by Laura Berglan, Heidi McIntosh and Thomas Delehanty of Earthjustice and Roger Flynn and Jeffrey C. Parsons of the Western Mining Action Project. Haaland and the DOI's Bureau of Land Management and BLM officials are represented by Daniel Luecke and Matthew Marinelli of the U.S. Department of Justice's Environment and Natural Resources Division, Natural Resources Section.

Arizona Lithium Ltd. is represented by William L. Thorpe, Mitchell W. Fleischmann and Bree Nevarez of Thorpe Shwer PC.

The case is Hualapai Indian Tribe v. Haaland et al., case number 3:24-cv-08154, in the U.S. District Court for the District of Arizona. ■

ADOT unveils three new specialty license plates
Two more plates also now available for motorcycles

PHOENIX – Arizonans have more choices to support their favorite charitable causes as the Arizona Department of Transportation Motor Vehicle Division offers three additional specialty license plates. With the addition of the Hualapai Tribe, Phoenix Rising FC and Rotary International specialty plates, MVD now offers 104 options that can be viewed at azdot.gov/plates and ordered at azmvdnow.gov/plates.

In addition to the three new plates, Arizona Highways and the redesigned Keep Arizona Beautiful plates are both now available as motorcycle plates.

“Specialty license plates offer a great way to customize a vehicle and show your proud support for one of these uniquely Arizona organizations,” MVD Director Eric Jorgensen said. “MVD is pleased to offer the various plates that will have an impact for the organizations dedicated to improving Arizona and our communities.”

Most specialty plates cost $25 each year. Of that amount, $17 goes to a designated charity or non-profit group. During the fiscal year that ended June 30, sales of specialty plates contributed over $12 million for various causes and charities.

Specialty plates are authorized by the Arizona Legislature and have been offered since 1989. Plate designs complete a review by ADOT and law enforcement. Personalization can be added for an additional $25 per year.

Learn more about each of these plates:

Hualapai Tribe

This specialty plate is available to anyone, and $17 goes to the Hualapai Tribe for ongoing human services to Tribal elders, healthy and positive activities for Tribal youth, and support for programs related to health, recreation and education in the community.

“The Hualapai Tribe is proud to have a specialty license plate now available to citizens across Arizona and is grateful to the many Tribal members who helped make this possible,” said Tribal Chairman Duane Clarke. “Those who purchase the Hualapai Tribe specialty plates will be helping with ongoing support for programs in the community. This is a great opportunity, and we look forward to sharing the many benefits with the Hualapai people.”

Phoenix Rising FC

This specialty plate is available to anyone, and $17 goes to provide soccer programs and services to boys and girls K thru 12 whose families have financial challenges.

“Our fans have been asking for a Phoenix Rising license plate for years, and we’re thrilled to finally make this a reality. We involved our fans every step of the way to select the most popular plate while adhering to the state’s guidelines,” said Phoenix Rising President Bobby Dulle. “It’s a fantastic way for our fans to show their Rising pride on the road and, best of all, every plate purchased will support our youth programs, helping to make the game more accessible for young players across our community.”

Rotary International

This specialty plate is available to anyone, with $17 going to support the Rotary Clubs of Arizona and their projects.

“These license plates will not only showcase our commitment to service but also provide an opportunity for individuals to support Rotary’s humanitarian efforts such as education, health, and clean water,” said Stephen Phair, President and Founder of the Rotary Clubs of Arizona. “This has been a collaborative effort involving Rotarians from every corner of our state, and we are grateful for their contributions. The official license plate will serve as a symbol of Rotary’s dedication to making a positive impact in communities locally and globally.”

CPW announces discovery of Zebra Mussels in the Colorado River and Government Highline Canal*Submitted by: Annette Bravo | Native American Fish and Wildlife Society*<https://cpw.state.co.us/news/07162024/cpw-announces-discovery-zebra-mussels-colorado-river-and-government-highline-canal>Rachael Gonzales

Twitter: @CPW_NW CPW announces discovery of Zebra Mussels in the Colorado River and Government Highline Canal

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. - Colorado Parks and Wildlife (CPW) announces the discovery of zebra mussel veligers in the Colorado River and Government Highline Canal after routine testing in early July.

On July 1, staff from CPW's Aquatic Nuisance Species (ANS) team collected a plankton sample from the Government Highline Canal near Clifton. This sample was evaluated at the ANS Lab in Denver where a suspected single zebra mussel veliger was found. The sample was then sent to CPW's Aquatic Animal Health Lab (AAHL) for further analysis. On July 9, the lab notified Robert Walters, Invasive Species Program Manager, that the sample was positive for zebra mussel DNA.

On July 8, CPW ANS staff collected plankton samples from two locations in the Colorado River upstream of the Grand Valley Water Users Canal diversion. On July 10 ANS technicians identified single suspect zebra mussel veligers in both samples. The samples were sent to the AAHL for confirmation. On July 11, the lab confirmed the samples were positive for zebra mussel DNA.

With single detections in both waters, these locations are now considered "suspect" for the presence of zebra mussels. In response to this detection, CPW has initiated their Invasive Species Rapid Response Plan and increased sampling is underway to determine if the classification should be changed to "positive," a designation given when two or more subsequent sampling events detect mussel veligers in a water body. A veliger is the free-floating (planktonic) larval stage of the mussel. At this stage of their life cycle, zebra mussels can only be seen under a microscope. No adult zebra mussels have been found at this time at either location. "This challenging discovery has ecological and economic impacts not only on the Grand Valley but potential statewide impacts as well. CPW is committed to working with all of our partners as we work to better understand the extent of this discovery and the next steps in protecting the natural resources and infrastructure," said CPW Director Jeff Davis.

Zebra mussels pose an extreme risk of ecological impacts to Colorado. The establishment of zebra mussels in the Colorado River is likely to negatively impact native fish populations due to their filter-feeding strategies that strip essential prey items, such as plankton, from the water. Slower-moving sections of the Colorado River, such as pools, eddies, and backwaters, are especially prone to invasion.

Zebra mussels also pose a risk to infrastructure that pulls water from the Colorado River. Female zebra mussels can produce up to 1,000,000 eggs in a spawning season. As they mature, the mussels bond to surfaces with byssal threads making them extremely difficult to remove. This rapid reproduction coupled with their attachment by byssal threads can lead to clogged water infrastructures creating long-term maintenance issues.

"We are disappointed in the situation we find ourselves in," said Ed Warner, Area Manager, BOR Western Colorado Area Office.

"We know how much effort CPW has put into keeping the Colorado River clear of zebra mussels. This is an extremely difficult scenario for all who rely on the Upper Colorado River system. We look forward to partnering with CPW, our stakeholders, and all involved to do what we can to address the situation."

"This news is devastating," said Tina Bergonzini, Grand Valley Water Users Association General Manager "Having our canal and the Colorado River test positive increases the threat of this invasive species and could impact everyone in the Grand Valley. From irrigation to drinking water, the ramifications cannot be underestimated or overstated. Our efforts, alongside our partners at CPW and the BOR, will be increased to protect our infrastructure, the livelihoods of so many, and water security for us all."

CPW staff will continue working closely with our partners at the Bureau of Reclamation and Grand Valley Water Users Association on the next steps. Signs alerting the public of the river status will be posted at river access points starting in the De Beque Canyon to the Loma Boat Ramp. "Detecting mussels in the Colorado River highlights how critical it is for boaters, paddlers, anglers, and any person recreating in Colorado's waters to do their part in preventing the spread," said Robert Walters, Invasive Species Program Manager.

CPW strongly encourages anyone boating, floating, paddling, or fishing in the Colorado River to clean, drain, and dry their vessels and equipment, including motorized boats, rafts, paddle boards, kayaks, and fishing gear after exiting the river.

CPW is evaluating options for the future management of Highline Lake based on this new information. Updates regarding access, fishing regulations, and water management will be provided once those decisions have been made.

Questions from the media for the Bureau of Reclamation can be directed to BOR Public Affairs Specialist Justyn Liff at 970-248-0625 or jliff@usbr.gov.

Questions from the media for the Grand Valley Water Users Association can be directed to GVWUA General Manager Tina Bergonzini at 970-242-5065 or tbergonzini@gvwua.com.

VA awards over $800 million in grants to help homeless and at-risk Veterans and their families

WASHINGTON — Today, the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs announced it will award $806.4 million in grants to help homeless and at-risk Veterans through the Supportive Services for Veteran Families and Homeless Providers Grant and Per Diem programs.

- Supportive Services for Veteran Families: Through the SSVF program, VA is awarding 239 grants totaling approximately $797.5 million to community organizations that help rapidly rehouse Veterans and their families, prevent the imminent loss of Veterans' homes, or identify more suitable housing situations.

Grant and Per Diem Program: Through the GPD program, VA will award 14 grants totaling approximately $8.9 million to community organizations that provide Veterans with transitional housing and case management — including connecting eligible Veterans to VA benefits, community-based services, and permanent housing. These special need grants will fund approximately 105 transitional housing beds to support special populations of homeless Veterans including women, elderly, terminally ill, chronically mentally ill, or those who care for minor dependents.

Ending Veteran homelessness is a top priority of VA and the Biden-Harris Administration. The number of Veterans experiencing homelessness fell by 4.5% between 2020 to 2023 and has dropped 52% overall since 2010. These grants also build upon the significant progress to end Veteran homelessness, including progress towards VA's fiscal year 2024 goal to house 41,000 more homeless Veterans. In 2023, VA placed more than 46,500 homeless Veterans into permanent housing, exceeding the goal set for 2023 by nearly 23%.

"We're making real progress in reducing Veteran homelessness, but there is much more work to do," said VA Secretary Denis McDonough. "These grants allow VA and the entire Biden-Harris Administration, alongside community partners, to provide more housing and wraparound services to more homeless and at-risk Veterans than ever before." These efforts are built upon the evidence-based "Housing First" approach, which prioritizes housing Veterans, followed by providing them the wraparound support to stay housed, including health care, job training, legal and education assistance, and more.

These new grant awards come just a week after the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) and VA announced policy changes that will help more Veterans receive housing assistance under the HUD-VA Supportive Housing (HUD-VASH) program. The changes include requiring public housing agencies that administer HUD-VASH to set initial income eligibility at 80% of area median income, and excluding Veterans' disability benefits when determining income eligibility — both of which are expected to increase the number of Veterans eligible for housing assistance.

For more information about VA's comprehensive efforts to end Veteran homelessness, visit VA.gov/homeless. AZ Tourism Office Unveils Vibrant State Brand for Arizona

Submitted by: Joshua Coddington | Arizona Office of Tourism

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

AZ TOURISM OFFICE UNVEILS VIBRANT STATE BRAND FOR ARIZONA

PHOENIX (Aug. 23, 2024) — Today the Arizona Office of Tourism (AOT) unveiled Vibrant Arizona, a new brand that celebrates the state’s diversity and vibrant culture, unifies the identity of state government, and strengthens the state’s competitiveness as a top tourism and business destination.

The multi-faceted Vibrant Arizona brand includes a logo highlighting Arizona’s diverse geography, a color palette inspired by Arizona’s natural beauty, and six defining pillars of the Arizona experience as shared by Arizonans. The brand was crafted by traveling hundreds of miles across Arizona and engaging more than 2,000 Arizonans about what they love about their communities, their perceptions of Arizona, and their hopes for the future.

It was created through a collaborative effort between AOT, Phoenix-based Heart & Soul Marketing, and community engagement specialists Welcome Strategies. In addition to the geographically diverse presentation of “Arizona,” the new logo also features a pattern created through a partnership between Heart & Soul Marketing and Hopi and Isleta Pueblo artist Kevin Coochwytewa.

“Arizona deserves a brand as vibrant as its people—one that showcases our collective Arizona story,” said Governor Katie Hobbs. “Our new state brand highlights the diversity of voices and experiences that make our home so special. Whether you want to hike the Grand Canyon, explore Phoenix’s vibrant food scene, or appreciate the arts and culture of Bisbee, Arizona has something for you. I’m proud to join the Office of Tourism in unveiling a brand that shows the world there is something to explore and discover in all corners of our great state.”

“The key to the success of our refreshed state brand is that Arizonans built and own this story about who we are and what we hold dear,” said Lisa Urias, CEO of the Arizona Office of Tourism. “Talking to a wide range of people across the state helped us ensure our updated brand reflects what Arizonans love about the state and want amplified. This brand emerged as a reflection of those amazing experiences.”

Stacked New State Logo

Arizonans can expect to see the new brand implemented in the following ways:

- A new multichannel tourism campaign “Vibrant Arizona” will launch in early 2025 to encourage visitation to Arizona from surrounding drive markets, target U.S. cities, and top international destinations.
- The new “Arizona” brand mark will also be used to unify the identity of state agencies, providing a more complete view of the wide range of services provided by the state.

The year-long process to develop the brand —“Discovering Arizona: Finding the Future of Arizona’s Story”— featured in-person and digital listening sessions in 57 Arizona communities ranging from Page to Douglas to Window Rock to Yuma to tribal communities including Navajo Nation, Hopi Tribe, Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community (SRPMIC), Gila River Indian Community, and White Mountain Apache Tribe.

The themes that emerged left no doubt that Arizonans, regardless of location, share many common views about the state, including appreciating its majestic beauty, vibrant culture, and abundant diversity.

About the Brand:

The brand features a logo with multiple variations.

- Conversations with Arizonans informed the foundation of the brand, which is made up of six pillars: Majestic Beauty; Vibrant Arts, Culture & Experiences; Abundant Diversity; Welcoming Warmth; Strong Connections; and Trailblazing Ingenuity. These defining characteristics of the Arizona experience were identified through the Discovering Arizona Listening Tours, agreed upon by the majority of participants, and then confirmed by a 1,000-participant statewide survey.

About 'Vibrant' Arizona:

- One of the most challenging aspects of the process was determining one word or phrase to associate with the "Arizona" brand mark. "Vibrant" ultimately won out for its ability to shift perceptions of Arizona. "Changing the perception of Arizona from being a barren desert to a place filled with vibrancy" was what residents said they wanted.

About the Logo:

- The new Arizona logo combines several defining elements of the state into one visual representation.
- The block letters show the state's strength and permanence, the "Z" morphs into mountains adorned with a single Sagua-ro, highlighting the diversity of Arizona's geography.
- The most prominent feature is the sun, which gives life, provides astounding beauty, is enjoyed by millions and must be respected.
- The pattern adorning the sun incorporates several carefully-chosen symbols that represent Arizona's people, history, cul-ture, economy and forces that shape life here.

Brand Refresh Team:

- Arizona Office of Tourism
- Heart & Soul Marketing, a Phoenix-based full-service advertising and brand strategy agency, was responsible for the re-branding strategy and visual brand identity
- Welcome Strategies, Phoenix-based consulting practice specializing in community engagement

"Most importantly, on behalf of the entire brand refresh team, I want to send a heartfelt thank you to all the Arizonans who wel-come us into their communities, took time to engage with us and who opened their hearts to participate in this effort," said Urias. "We would not have a new Arizona brand to reveal today without you."

About the Arizona Office of Tourism: The Arizona Office of Tourism works to strengthen and grow Arizona's economy through travel and tour-ism promotion, positioning Arizona as the leading tourism destination for domestic and international travelers. In 2023, tourism employed more than 187,000 Arizonans and contributed over $4.2 billion in tax revenue to our federal, state and local economies.

Brand Refresh Stakeholder Quotes:

"Arizona is a vibrant, diverse state. It's good to see this administration including Kevin Coochwytewa - a Hopi professional designer - in the execution of this new identity for Arizona," said Governor Stephen R. Lewis, Gila River Indian Community.

"It's heartening to know that this process engaged Arizona's rich diversity, with the outcome capturing the state's wide-ranging landscapes and environments," said Chairman Robert Miguel, Ak-Chin Indian Community

"Representation of our 22 tribal nations within the new brand of Arizona is critical. We're pleased that Governor Hobbs and the Arizona Office of Tourism took time to visit with us in Navajo and with many of our respective tribal communities to ensure our voices are reflected in the new brand," said Bobby V. Martin, Director, Navajo Tourism Department, Division of Economic Development.

"I'm excited to see something that represents who we are and the vibrancy of our community. AOT was able to tackle a very big, diverse chal-lenge and capture the essence of Arizona and put it into one symbol." - J. Felipe Garcia, President & CEO, Visit Tucson

"I'm excited to see the new logo, I feel like it's finally representing all of us and it's showing all of the elements that make up Arizona. It shows the diversity and the terrain and it really hit the mark." - Heidi Hansen, Economic Vitality Director, City of Flagstaff

"I love how simply the new logo brings together not just one part of Arizona, but all of Arizona, including the tribal communities. I love it!" - Arden Redshirt, Antelope Canyon Tours

"Vibrant Arizona will help change the perception of our great state and make us more competitive for both tourism and business. Visit Phoenix is excited to embark on this journey with the state of Arizona." - Ron Price, President and CEO, Visit Phoenix

"Arizona's new brand boldly captures the essence of our state, celebrating our rich culture and diversity. As we strive to create greater de-mand for all that Arizona has to offer, this brand is a testament to our enduring relevance, inclusivity, and authenticity. It's a rallying cry that unites support both statewide and locally, ensuring that our spirit resonates with all who visit and live here." - Marc Garcia, President and CEO, Visit Mesa

"To create a brand that is not only a true reflection of all that Arizona is today, but also captures what it can be in the future, is something I'm so proud of. Our goal is that every Arizonan can look at this new brand and see a piece of themselves in there – all of our stories woven to-gether – and be proud of and excited for the bright future ahead. And that new era begins today." - Hannah Heisler, Associate Creative Direc-tor of Heart & Soul Marketing.

"I have had the honor to work on positioning, launching and refreshing some of the largest consumer brands in the world during my career, but the opportunity to personally be involved in rebranding the state of Arizona – my home for the past 19 years – is the one that I am most proud of." - Brad Casper Chief Executive Officer of Heart & Soul Marketing.

"As a Hopi, whose people and ancestral lands are ingrained in Arizona's footprint, I am incredibly honored to have played a role in shaping the future of Arizona's story. To be able to celebrate all that our Indigenous communities contribute not only to our history, but also to our future within the logo itself, speaks to how hard we worked to ensure the new brand was as inclusive as possible." - Kevin Coochwytewa, Hopi and Isleta Pueblo, Designer.

Seeking Bids for General Community Meeting • Due by Friday, September 6th

Submitted by: Adeline Crozier | Hualapai Tribal Administration

The Great Spirit created Man and Woman in his own image. In doing so, both were created as equals. Both depending on each other in order to survive. Great respect was shown for each other; in doing so, happiness and contentment was achieved then, as it should be now.

The connecting of the Hair makes them one person; for happiness or contentment cannot be achieved without each other.

The Canyons are represented by the purples in the middle ground, where the people were created. These canyons are Sacred, and should be so treated at all times.

The Reservation is pictured to represent the land that is ours, treat it well.

The Reservation is our heritage and the heritage of our children yet unborn. Be good to our land and it will continue to be good to us.

The Sun is the symbol of life, without it nothing is possible - plants don't grow - there will be no life - nothing. The Sun also represents the dawn of the Hualapai people. Through hard work, determination and education, everything is possible and we are assured bigger and brighter days ahead.

The Tracks in the middle represent the coyote and other animals which were here before us.

The Green around the symbol are pine trees, representing our name Hualapai - PEOPLE OF THE TALL PINES -

Hualapai Per Capita Trust • Cultural Classes Required to Receive a Certificate
Submitted by: Camille Nighthorse | Hualapai Department of Cultural Resources

HUALAPAI PER CAPITA TRUST

Required Cultural Classes Online for Certificate of Certification

Cultural Class 1: Civics

Cultural Class 2: Stories

Cultural Class 3: Cultural Geography

Cultural Class 4: Ethnobotany (YouTube video)

Each quiz coincides with the email address it comes from, so each individual student must request for the test to receive his/her own quiz. This helps keep track through an Excel spreadsheet automatically generated on Google Forms.

After passing each quiz, a certificate of completion will be sent by email to the student. It is the student's responsibility to turn in the certificate to the tribal office to begin the process of the per capita payout.

The Department of Hualapai Cultural Resources is not responsible for filling out any forms or turning in the certificates of completions to the Tribal Office.

To get started, email culturalcenter@hualapai-nsn.gov and/or marcie.craynon@hualapai-nsn.gov to get started on receiving your reading materials and taking your quizzes. For any further questions, call Cultural Center at 928-769-2223/2234.

Message to the Hualapai Community

Gamyu'je!

My name is Dominick Cabarloc, I am the Healing House Program Manager. This address is to notify the community that the Healing House has opened with our first client July 2024. Staff and I are pleased to officially open our facility to assist in better serving the need of the Hualapai Community. Through the opening since May when staff came on board we have been working proactively to implement programming, handbook, protocol and Standard Operating Procedures for our Department. Staff and I have also taken certification classes for requirements in our positions and will continue to build on training efforts to help us better serve the community.

Team effort has been a big contributor to the process of our Programming, design and structure of our Program and Facility guidelines. Clients are on a set schedule that is very structured with a curriculum adopted by staff with the approach of Self-Directed skills and Dialectical Behavior Therapy, including cultural based activities. A PHASE system has also been adopted by staff which all clients process through the first 30 days of admission into our Program.

Clients will gain tools necessary to positively reintegrate back into the community. Family reunification is a plus and we are very open to family visits and advocating for our clients while in our Program.

I hope this message finds you all well and in good spirits. In addition I have attached information for reference in regard to our intake criteria and referral process.

I will end this message with introducing the current Healing House Staff:

Dominick Cabarloc- Program Manager
Nick Hunter- Wellness Coordinator/Lead Resident Advocate
Gensean Putesoy- Resident Advocate
Xaitia Hart- Resident Advocate
Deion Parker- Resident Advocate

Listeners may enjoy her narrating many of the children's stories during Read On Hualapai, Sun through Thurs at 8:00pm and sharing the weekly calendar of events for the Senior Center. This month she helped out at the Back to School Bash, too. She also regularly, generously donates items for volunteer incentives and listener giveaways. Barb also sits on the KWLP Advisory committee. She was instrumental in putting a fund raiser together for the station earlier this Spring. In addition to the $100.00 + in incentives she receives this month; Barb is also eligible to be Volunteer of the Year. If you might be interested in volunteering, call us at (928) 769-1110.
